Desaltory.

SOME EVERY DAY MATTERS.

"Moral Courage" was printed in large letters and put as the caption of the following items, and placed in a conspicuous place on the door of a systematic merchant in New York for constant reference:

Have the courage to discharge a debt while you have the money in your pocket.

Have the courage to speak your mind when it is necessary that you should do so, and hold your tongue when it is prudent that you should do so.

Have the courage to speak to a friend in a "seedy" coat, even though you are in company with a rich one and richly attired.

Have the courage to own you are poor, and thus disarm poverty of its sharpest sting.

Have the courage to tell a man why you refuse to credit him.

will not lend him your money.

Have the courage to cut the most agreeable acquaintance you have when you are convinced that he lacks principle; a friend should bear with a friend's infirmities, but not with his vices.

Have the courage to show your respect for honesty, in whatever guise it appears, and your contempt for dishonesty and dissimilarity by whomsoever exhibited.

Have the courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones.

Have the courage to prefer comfort and propriety to fashion, in all things.

Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance, rather than to seek for knowledge by false premises.

Have the courage, in providing an entertainment for your friends, not to exceed your means.

Have the courage to insure the property in your possession, and thereby pay your risk of being ridiculed by man.—

THE GREAT EASTERN HOTEL IN

CALCUTTA.

We had rooms at this famous hotel, the building covers one side of the block and in three stories high each story being near thirty feet, making this building as high as a six story building in New York.
This piazza for each story at twenty feet wide and are on the rear. These piazzas answer for a hall. Every one goes along these piazzas to their rooms. There is no reception room or parlor, but the rooms are all very large and convenient. When you take rooms you must employ a servant, at a cost of half a rupee a day, and that servant is exclusively yours while you remain in the city and carry bundles.

His dress is white, and when he serves you he puts his hat on and takes his shoes off; but if he goes out in the hot sun, he leaves his hat and goes bareheaded.

There were two or three hundred at the great dining hall, and behind every guest stood a copper colored servant in white.
They were all bareheaded and all wore white hats. That is the fashion here and there can be no deviation from that rule.

The kitchen is far away from the dining room and these servants in white run in and out, and look like so many ghosts.
The crowds congregate by thousands on and around all the buildings, especially all the kites, and if anything that can be eaten is left for a moment within the reach of these hungry, noisy birds, they seize and away they go. Instantly hundreds will join in the chase, and the chances are the thief will lose the morsel that he has stolen.—Hon. N. F. Gates in the N. Y.
Observer.
